COMPATIBILITY BETWEEN MACHINES AND MEDIA

Most BBC Soft software can be transferred to disc and/or networks and work on the BBC B+ and/or non-standard disc systems. Most of the items not marked as Master128 compatible will work if "Convert 10" is run first. Only those titles available on 3.5" disc will work on the Master Compact. 3.5" discs can be used on a Master128 if a suitable disc drive is attached (these do not require Convert 10). If you have a non-standard BBC computer system and you are in doubt as to whether a particular piece of software will work on your system, please ring 01-927 4128 to check, or write to the Manager at BBC Software.

SOFTWARE MULTI-USER LICENCES

BBC Software has a software multi-user licence scheme which allows a school or institution to purchase one software pack plus a licence to use it on up to fifty machines at a single site. The licence charge equals the VAT inclusive price of the software being licenced.

The licences are intended for establishments using the Econet system but should you have several stand-alone computers this system will also apply to you. Area licences to meet the needs of Local Education Authorities and Universities are available at negotiable rates.

With a few exceptions, almost all BBC Software software for schools is Econet compatible. Some of it can be used off the shelf (these titles are marked "ECONET compatible" in this catalogue) while other titles require special-version programs which would be supplied with the licence. Additional manuals are also available, mostly costing around £2.00 per copy.

You can apply for a licence for software you have already bought. Alternatively, your application can accompany your order. This is a cash-with-order service and you should send a cheque/PO payable to BBC Enterprises. Price lists, catalogues and lists of Econet compatible titles are available on request.
